

Late Winter & Early Spring Birds of the Lakes Region

Thursday, March 17, 7:30 PM at The Loon Center on Lees Mill Rd. in Moultonborough

Join Tony Vazzano as he shows pictures and discusses late winter birds, and early spring migrants who will be arriving in the Lakes Region during the next few weeks.

Tony Vazzano has lived in Sandwich for most of his life and has been birding in the area for nearly 30 years and has led field trips for NH Audubon and other organizations for over 10 years. He is the summer seasonal editor for New Hampshire Bird Records and a member of the NH Rare Bird Committee.

Since some robins often spend the winter here, they may no longer be the harbinger of spring that they once were. But other birds like hawks, Red-winged Blackbirds and American Woodcocks are making their way northward. Insect eaters like Eastern Phoebe and Tree Swallows will soon follow as the snow melts.
